To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing this letter in response to the recommendation request made by Suk Min Hwang, one of the job applicants for a Software Engineer position (Job ID: JR0122778) in Intel.

I'm CS Hur who works in Intel Chandler as a SW engineer. He is a friend's son and has been around since his childhood. Especially since he has attended university in the United States and we are in same time zone, he sometimes shared opinions about the programming and technology with me.

He stands out among many candidates I have seen. During a series of interaction, I found him to be very enthusiastic, highly motivated person who has strong foundation in computer science through meaningful school/research/internship experiences. I see a great deal of potentiality in him as a software engineer.

I felt the necessity for writing this letter as internal referral is not open to this position. He showed an exceptional interest in this particular position, that I am pleased to recommend him in your organization.

Sincerely,
